

REMARKS

REVIEW

The current application sets forth Claims 1 through 20 of which Claims 1 and 10 are independent claims. Presently, no claims have been indicated as allowed in view of the prior art.

Claims 1-7, 9, 11-17, and 19 stand collectively rejected under 35 U.S.C. §102(b) as being allegedly anticipated by Bassett, U.S. Patent No. 3,057,624 (“Bassett”). Claims 1-7, 9, 11-17, and 19 also stand rejected under 35 U.S.C. §103(a) as being allegedly obvious under Bassett, U.S. Patent No. 3,057,624 in view of Ward, U.S. Patent No. 4,060,246 (“Ward”). Claims 4-7, 9, 14-17, 19 stand rejected under, 35 U.S.C. §102(b) or, in the alternative, 35 U.S.C. §103(a) as unpatentable over Bassett in view of Somerville, U.S. Patent No. 4,828,268 (“Somerville”). Claims 8 and 18 stand rejected under 35 U.S.C. §103(a) as unpatentable over Bassett in view of Somerville and further in view of Grutta, U.S. Patent No. 2,972,833 (“Grutta”). Finally, Claims 10 and 20 stand rejected under 35 U.S.C. §103(a) as unpatentable over Bassett in view of Somerville and further in view of Kleva, U.S. Patent No. 4,341,386 (“Kleva”).

SUMMARY OF TELEPHONE INTERVIEW WITH SUPERVISING EXAMINER

Applicant gratefully acknowledges the telephonic interview with Mr. Dennis Banks conducted on July 22, 2004. In summary, Supervisor Banks agreed with Applicant that Examiner’s interpretation of the base reference, Bassett, was overly broad in that the claims of the present application, as amended, are limited to the use of a dry-erase marker, and that the term “dry-erase marker” is a term of common understanding that does not include a pencil, chalk or other article that is “dry-erasable,” i.e., capable of making marks that are dry. It was also conceded by the Supervisor that it is well-known that dry-erase markers do not produce easily erasable marks upon cardboard, because dry-erase markers use wet ink which soaks into porous surfaces. Thus, it was agreed that it was erroneous for Examiner to reject the claims of the present application as being anticipated by Bassett under §102 and as a base reference for rejections under §103. Supervisor volunteered to instruct the examiner to withdraw that ground of rejection.

Supervisor Banks did, however, suggest a second reference that allegedly may be combined with Bassett to render the claims obvious. However, as respectfully pointed out below, the combination fails to render such claims obvious.

Supervisor Banks further agreed to instruct Examiner to withdraw finality of rejection in light of the interview and the new reference. It is understood that no proposed claims were agreed to in that interview.

35 U.S.C. §102(b) REJECTION

The claims have again been amended to address the 35 U.S.C. §102(b) rejection and Applicant respectfully traverses such ground of rejection with the above amendments and the following remarks. It was agreed in the telephone interview with the Supervisor of Art Unit 3712 that this rejection was incorrect and should be withdrawn, especially in light of the amendments submitted by Applicant. Examiner continues to assert that Bassett anticipates the present application because it discloses cardboard as a surface out of which the gameboard claimed may be made, and according to Examiner, “cardboard surfaces are well known to be compatible with dry-erasable markers.” (Emphasis supplied).

The term “dry-erase markers” has the commonly understood definition and is the generic name for a type of ink bearing marking pen. Such markers are sold, for example, under the trademarks “EXPO®” and “AVERY® MARKS-A-LOT®.” Applicant has enclosed web pages of businesses offering for sale such articles using the generic name “dry erase marker” to describe the products.

Turning to the reference cited, Bassett does not disclose or suggest that the board pieces disclosed therein possess a surface upon which one could write, draw or otherwise mark with a dry-erase marker such that marks made by a dry-erase marker could be easily erased. Indeed, Bassett does not even suggest marking upon the surface of its board at all. It is well-known that a cardboard surface is not compatible with ink-bearing markers, or marking pens, such that a mark upon a cardboard surface could be easily erased because cardboard is a porous surface. Applicant invites Examiner to find a dry-erase marking pen, as defined above and according common usage of the term, and apply ink from such a pen to a portion of cardboard. The ink may not be erased unless the surface of the cardboard has been sealed to be non-porous. Bassett in no way teaches or even suggests treating cardboard or any other surface so that it is nonporous in order for such a surface to be compatible with a dry-erase marker so that marks from such a marker could be easily erased.

The confusion arises in Examiner's use of the term "dry-erasable marker" instead of the term "dry-erase marker," which is actually the term chosen by Applicant as amended in the previous response. Applicant has presented ample evidence as to how the term "dry-erase marker" is interpreted in plain language, and Examiner's usage is overly broad.

Apparently, Examiner appears to use the secondary reference of the following §103(a) rejection, Ward, to equate a pencil with a dry-erase marker, under the broader term of "dry-erasable marker." Examiner overlooks, however, that Ward limits the surface upon which the pencil may be used to paper or poster board. See Pat. No. 4,060,246, Col. 5, ll. 1-10. Ward further describes the surfaces for use with pencil as being possibly disposable after each use. See id. Ward certainly does not suggest erasing the marks made by such pencil or pen.

Applicant reminds Examiner that as the surface and the dry-erase marker in question has been defined both in this correspondence and in the application itself, the construction of those terms in the claims will assume those definitions, which clearly make these claims distinct from Bassett, rendering it ineligible as a prior art reference under §102.

Based upon the above-described distinctions and the above amendments, it is asserted that Claims 1 and 11 and their respective dependent claims are now in condition for allowance and acknowledgment of the same is earnestly solicited.

35 U.S.C. §103(a) REJECTIONS

In view of the above amendments and the significant distinctions discussed above, Applicant again respectfully traverses all such grounds of rejection. By relying on rejection grounds under 35 U.S.C. §103(a) for alleged obviousness, and by various statements throughout the detailed Office Action, the PTO already acknowledges certain important deficiencies of the base reference, Bassett, which renders such base reference inadequate for serving as a rejection basis by itself for any of Claims 4 through 10 and 14 through 20.

An invention is only obvious under 35 U.S.C. §103(a) if "the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains." 35 U.S.C. §103(a) (Emphasis added). The task of proving obviousness is not merely establishing that all of the elements of a claimed invention would have been obvious. It must be shown that the particular combination of elements used to form the whole invention would have been obvious. There must be some suggestion, incentive, or motivation to combine the elements in the manner as in the claimed invention.

1. Claims 1-7, 9, 11-17, and 19.

Bassett in view of Ward fails to render the present invention obvious under §103(a). Whether "one skilled in the art might find it obvious to try various combinations...is not the standard." In re Geiger, 815 F.2d 686, 688, 2 U.S.P.Q.2d 1276, 1278 (Fed. Cir. 1987). "Obviousness cannot be established by combining the teachings of the prior art to produce the claimed invention, absent some teaching or suggestion supporting the combination. Under section 103, teachings of references can be combined only if there is some suggestion or incentive to do so.” ACS Hospital Systems, Inc. v. Montefiore Hospital, et al., 732 F.2d 1572, 1577, 221 U.S.P.Q. 929, 933 (Fed. Cir. 1984). “There must be some reason, suggestion, or motivation found in the prior art whereby a person of ordinary skill in the field of the invention would make the combination.” In re Oetiker, 977 F.2d 1443, 1447, 24 U.S.P.Q.2d 1443, 1446 (Fed. Cir. 1992).

Bassett is directed to a gameboard, specifically a gameboard for chess, checkers and the like, that is segmented for enhanced portability. As noted above, Bassett neither discloses nor suggests in any way marking upon the surface of the board. In fact, the games recited by Bassett do not entail marking upon the surface of the board at all. Thus, it is apparent that Bassett did not contemplate using the surface of the gameboard for accommodating marks of any kind.

On the other hand, Ward discloses a horse-race simulation game employing a panel upon which the status or results of the races are kept. The results may be displayed upon the panel by marking with a pen or pencil. See Ward, Col. 3, ll. 59-67. One embodiment includes a panel formed of a hard surface for use with a felt-tipped marker pen dispensing an ink that dries quickly such that marks from the pen upon the surface are readily erasable. See id. Col. 5, ll. 10-21, 35-52. Missing from Ward, however, is any notion that the panel should be easily portable, much less portable through interlocking segmentation of the panel.

The prior art cited is completely devoid of any reason, suggestion, or motivation to combine the segmented gameboard of Bassett with the marking surface of Ward. Therefore, the two references cannot be combined to render the present invention obvious. Since no objective teaching exists in either Bassett or Ward, no prima facie case of obviousness exists.

2. Claims 4-7, 9, 14-17, 19.

Examiner asserts that the subject Claims are rendered obvious by Bassett in view of Somerville. For the reasons set forth above, Applicant reasserts its contention that Bassett is ineligible as a base reference in that it fails to teach a gameboard having a surface upon which one could use a dry-erase marker to make marks that are readily erasable. Somerville fails to cure this defect. The combination of Bassett and Somerville, therefore, fails to render the claimed invention as a whole obvious. Somerville is directed to a gameboard comprised of a plurality of interlocking tiles. There is no suggestion in Somerville, of a tile with a surface that allows one to use a dry-erase marker such that marks made upon this surface are readily erased. Thus, the references combined fail to teach, or even suggest the elements of the present invention.

3. Claims 8 and 18

Examiner asserts that the subject Claims are rendered obvious by Bassett in view of Somerville, in further view of Grutta. Applicant restates it's assertion from above, that the combination of Bassett and Somerville fails to teach the elements of the present invention. The addition of Grutta fails to cure this defect with respect to Claims 8 and 18. Grutta relates to interconnecting blocks possessing prongs with balled ends for holding the prongs within openings in an opposing block wall. Again, however, nothing in Grutta teaches drawing upon a non-porous surface using a dry-erase marker. Therefore, this combination likewise fails to render the claims of the present invention obvious.

4. Claims 10 and 20

Finally, the subject Claims are rejected as being allegedly obvious under §103(a) over Bassett in view of Somerville in further view of Kleva. Applicant again restates its point that Bassett, neither expressly nor inherently, discloses a substantially non-porous surface upon which one could use a dry-erase marker as that term is commonly understood. The combination of Bassett and Somerville fails to teach the elements of the present invention. Kleva cannot remedy these defects as it is directed to a gameboard, comprised of a plurality of board segments that are mutually engageable through the use of magnetic material, but, does not disclose at all the material out of which the surface of its gameboard is composed.

In summary, the combined teachings of the references fail to disclose or even suggest the subject matter of the claims at issue. That a prior art reference could be modified to form the claimed structure does not supply a suggestion to do so. In view of these considerations, it is submitted that the rejection of the claims as amended is no longer tenable and should be withdrawn. The claims should be deemed patentably distinct over the art and should be allowed.

CITED RELEVANT PRIOR ART

It is not believed that any of the prior art cited but not relied upon, alone or in combination either with each other or other cited prior art teaches, discloses, suggests or makes obvious the claimed features of the present invention.

CONCLUSION

In view of the foregoing amendments and comments, Applicant respectfully requests withdrawal of the current grounds of rejection and the issuance of a formal Notice of Allowance. The Examiner is invited to telephone the undersigned at his convenience should only minor issues remain after consideration of this amendment in order to permit early resolution of the same.

Respectfully submitted,
